Top tips for selling gold for ca$h

-  Cash for gold buyers are usually interested in buying gold for scrap, they do not usually consider the value of the craftsmanship or semi-precious stones within the gold items. For this reason, if high value gold items such as coins, medals and crafted antique jewellery are sold for scrap it is unlikely they will receive their true value. Cash for gold is useful for turning odd earrings or cufflinks, broken chains and brooches into cash.
-  Shop around to get an idea how much your gold is worth and to make sure you get the best prices. For example, visit local jewellers or check the going rate on ebay.
-  Check the reputation of the gold company before you agree to sell your gold especially if it is online or a postal service. Take care as the gold buying industry is unregulated.
-  If posting gold to a gold site always send via special delivery and keep a detailed inventory and photos of the items you have sent.
-  Make sure you know what you are selling, find out the carat and weight of the gold you want to sell for cash.
-  Explore the possibility of using a pawn shop if you require cash and are reluctant to permanently part with your gold items. If you use a pawn shop there is the possibility of 'buying back' your gold at a later stage if you have the cash to do so.
